The basis of settlement proposed by the Polk administration will yet have to be adopted. Until it is, there can be no such thing as peace on the border. The Sierra Madre must become the boundary line. Every intelligent man in western Texas, indeed every Texast, so believes. The facility with which the Rio Grande can be forded by the cattlethieves, and the impossibility of reaching and punishing them, save by a violation of international law, makes the acceptance by Mexico of the Polk line of the Sierra Madre -a natural barrier to raiders-an imperative necessity. In some cases the differ-ence in hight of wave may be caccounted for by the configuration of coast and outlaying reefs. The following is an account of the disaster at Hilo from an eye witness:

HILO, May 11. DEAR SIR—We have had a great disaster at Hilo. Thursday morning, the tenth instant, about four o'clock, the sea in the bay was seen to rise and fall in an unequal manner, and at five o'clock it swept in in a mighty wave, washing up and into all the stores in front of town, carrying off a great deal of lumber and all the stone wall of the wharf. The perpendicular hight of the wave, since ascertained, was twelve feet three inches above ordinary low-water mark. At War-kia the damage was frightful. Every house within a hundred yards of the water was SWEPT AWAY, SEVERE EARTHQUAKES were felt, followed a few minutes later by a jet of lava thrown up from the floor of the crater, near the east bank, through a crack which had evidently been made by an earthquake. The lava continues to spout at this place, gradually ascending the steep bluff to its summit, then moving along the isthmus, connecting the large crater with the smaller one of Kilaneake, down into the pit of which the lava ran. This continued for six hours, lava being thrown up in numerous jets along the line at different hights, at times reaching one hundred feet, and frequently there would be at least fifty of these jets at once, making a magnificent display. In locating the eruption and its general characteristics it appears to be identically the same as those of 1837, 1840 and 1868. Simultaneously with this the fire of the East and South lakes were extinguished, and for two days following no fires were seen in Kilava.

> MRS. MERIWETHER'S LECTURE. The lecture of Mrs. E. A. Meriwether, of Memphis, upon the theme "Woman before the Law," last Monday evening, was one of the ablest and most eloquent appeals that have ever been made for the amelioration of law in its relation to woman; and, as some of her auditors expressed it, the law looked very pitiful and repulsive as portrayed in her historical review. It was not Woman Before the Law,' but the law arraigned by woman-hood at the bar of eternal justice. Mrs. Meriwether demands an amelioration, and indeed, a fundamental change in the law which shall establish justice and equality be-tween the sexes; and, to make this demand with greater power, she assails with great force and clearness of statement the common idea of the sanctity, the dignity, and the wis-dom of law, which has been held up by Coke and Blackstone as the perfection of As examples of the monstrous injustice and bsurdity of law she dwelt at length upor the horrors of English law as illustrated i the law of heresy, the law of witchcraft (which lasted until (1766), the gypsylaws and the "benefit of clergy" law.
> The terrible cruelies; the judicial murders; the burning alive under a law of heresy which was entirely indefinite in its applica-tion; the inxumerable multitudes put to a cruel death for the imaginary crime of witch-craft; the infliction of death upon gypsy immigrants for no other crime than remaining a month in England, and the release of every robust felon who could read, upon the pre-sumption that his learning might enable him to become a priest—were dwelt upon by Mrs. Meriwether in a style which reminds one of the philippics of Demosthenes; and the venerable luminaries of the law—Blackstone, Coke and Bacon—were criticised with severity for their tame acquiescence or sophistical apologies for these out-rages upon humanity. Coming down to common modern law, which makes woman not only helpless to protect herself from un-just laws, but renders her the absolute prop-erty of her husband (or, as Shakespeare expresses, "my ox, my ass, my anything"), who not only owns her entire estate and the wages of her labor, but exercises the power of cor-poral punishment, and the right of snatching her children from her even when he is dead taking them from a living mother by the power of his will. Mrs. Meriwether eloquentrights for upholding these wrongs, and de-nounced the absurdity of Mr. John Bright's assertiou that women were not a class that needed protection, but could trust the protection of men, which protec-tion had deprived them of property, deprived them of their own children, and, in all cases where women were concerned, made the law oppressive by unequal punishments for similar offenses, as society gives women unequal payment for the same labor, and thus is perpetually driving them to destruction in prostitution. Prostitution is the monster evil that results from this legal nequality, and inequality in the rewards of abor, and will never be abated until something like legal and social equality shall be introduced. Our brief sketch gives a very inadequate idea of this graceful, forcible and eloquent lecture, which was highly appreci-ated by the audience, and received with heartfelt applause due to its merits. Those who doubt the ability of women to think with vigor and express themselves with simplicity and power, would be convinced by listening to Mrs. Meriwether's lecture, which indicates a high order of literary merit.

The Convention of Insane Asylum Superintendents. Sr. Louis, May 31 .- In the convention o ST. LOUIS, May 31.—In the convention of superintendents of insane asylums to-day, a very interesting paper on suicides was read by Dr. Gray, of the Utica (New York) asylum, in which he took the ground that while suicide is as unnatural act, it is not necessarily an evidence of insanity. Dr. Haynes, of St. Louis, read an elaborate paper on the "Unilatorial Abcess of the Cerebellum," in "Unilatorial Abcess of the Cerebellum," in which he gave a full account of a case which came under his own observation. This aftersoon the convention accepted an invitation to take a steamboat excursion on the steamer John A. Seudder, and had a very pleasant
